About the Camp

Actor's Workshop has enriched and entertained the lives of young people in the Triad since 1992.

The two week session is designed for the beginning and intermediate actor. Through improvisations, vocal exercises, and creative games, the camp allows the young performer to make the leap from "play acting" to "acting in plays". The camp will focus on the essential elements of acting, creating the role, and the etiquette of performing. Special activities will explore stage makeup, costuming and creative scenery.

In an atmosphere dedicated to excellence and joy in learning, our camp fosters self-confidence, discipline, initiative, responsibility and self worth.

A final performance in which the participants showcase their work and perform for friends and family is the highlight of the camp.

Instructors

Deborah Kintzing

A member of the Screen Actor's Guild, Ms. Kintzing has appeared in national commercials, series television, film and stage. She has worked in the industry as a professional actress, director, acting coach, and casting director. In Los Angeles, she served as instructor and private acting coach for Malibu Actor's Workshop. Former students include the offspring of such celebrities as Clark Gable, David Hemmings, and Louis Gossett, Jr.

She studied with Professional Artist's Group in Hollywood and holds a MFA in Acting and Directing from the University of North Carolina-Greensboro.

Donna Bradby

Ms. Bradby works as a professional actress, director, choreographer, and teacher. She has toured extensively with the North Carolina Touring Theatre Ensemble and directs regionally for such companies as Triad Stage, Broach Theatre, Temple Theatre-Sanford, and the Barn Dinner Theatre. She holds a MFA in Arts Management from Virginia Tech University and is a professor in the Visual Arts and Theatre department at A&T State University.

Camilla Millican Samuelson

Ms. Samuelson has served as General Manager for the North Carolina Theatre for Young People where she also directed and acted. She works professionally as a director, actress and producer.

She taught and directed at Stage Door Manor Performing Arts Theatre Camp in upstate New York, which was instrumental in launching the careers of such stars as Robert Downey, Jr., Mandy Moore, and Natalie Portman. Along with her late husband, Carl, she has produced extensively OFF Broadway. She holds a MFA from the University of North Carolina-Greensboro.
